Laſt Sunday Afternoon the Ship Live-Oak, Captain Lundberry, arrived here in 46 Days from Bristol, by whom we have received the following ADVICES, viz.

LONDON, JULY 10.

THIS morning ſome diſpatches of importance were received at the India-houſe in Leadenhall-ſtreet, from Madraſs, brought over land, ſaid to come from the three ſupervifors who lately arrived there.

Letters received in town from Peterſburgh adviſe, that the Ruſſians have abſolutely concluded a treaty with the King of Pruſſia, by which it is ſtipulated, that the latter muſt ſtand neuter in the preſent diſpute between the Ruſſians and the Porte; but, in caſe of neceſſity, that they muſt take arms againſt the latter, and aid the Ruſſians.

The laſt letters from the Hague adviſe, that an anſwer has been received from the elector-palatine, which gives reaſon to hope that the differences between his electoral highneſs and the States-general will ſoon be amicably adjuſted.

On Monday the agent for the province of Maſſachuſetts-Bay, received a packet containing ſome very important advices from his American conſtituents.

A correſpondent wiſhes to have perſons at the head of affairs, poſſeſſed of the following qualities: Diſcerning like Chatham, juſt like Camden, courageous like Marlborough, ſpirited like Cromwell, ſerene like Hardwike, and loyal like Beckford, whoſe honeſt heart could not diſguiſe his juſt ſentiments, though at the loſs of his prince's favour.

An officer of the army, lately returned from an inland part of America, has now in his poſſeſſion a conſiderable quantity of wool, the produce of Canada, which, by good judges, is eſteemed of a very fine texture, and proper to manufacture a broad-cloth, equal to the beſt Spaniſh. Samples of the above are preparing to be laid before the board of trade, ſociety of arts, and many principal American merchants.

JULY 12. Yeſterday morning came on at Guildhall, the election of a member of parliament for the city of London, in the room of the Right Hon. William Beckford, deceaſed. The livery in the hall were very numerous. The lord mayor did not attend, and the only aldermen preſent were the ſheriffs Townſend and Sawbridge, Sir William Stephenſon, Mr. Wilkes, and Mr. Oliver. At a quarter of an hour before twelve, Mr. Richard Oliver came on the huſtings, and was ſaluted by the chearful ſhouts of every one preſent. The court of huſtings for the election was opened by the ſheriffs, with the uſual proclamations, at one minute before twelve. After which the writ was read by the ſecondary. The ſheriffs were then ſworn, and the act of 23 George II. was read by the ſecondary. Theſe ceremonies being ended, the ſecondary, according to cuſtom, propoſed ſeverally each of the aldermen who are not members of parliament, which gave an opportunity to the livery to diſtinguiſh their friends from their foes, by their different reception. The aldermen whoſe names were favourably received, were Sir Charles Aſgill, Mr. Bridgen, and Sir William Stephenſon. The following were received without any marks of cenſure or applauſe, Sir Robert Kite, Mr. Peers, Mr. Kirkman, and Mr. Bird. Hiſſes were very plentifully beſtowed on Mr. Alſop, Mr. Turner, Mr. Hallifax, Mr. Shakeſpeare, Sir James Eſdaile, Mr. Kennet, Mr. Plumbe; but the groans and howls which iſſued at the names of Sir Henry Bankes, Mr. Naſh, and Mr. Roſſiter, can be expreſſed no where but in Guildhall, nor imagined by any perſons who have not heard them. Sir Robert Ladbroke, Sir Richard Glynn, Mr. Harley, Mr. Trecothick, Mr. Crosby, and the two ſheriffs Townſend and Sawbridge, being in parliament, were not nominated; and the ſecondary read a paper, which he received from Mr. Wilkes, in theſe words:——"Mr. Alderman Wilkes gives this notice to the ſecondary, that he conſiders himſelf as one of the legal members for the county of Middleſex, and therefore that he will not ſuffer his name to be in the liſt of thoſe aldermen, who, according to cuſtom, are put in nomination as candidates to repreſent the city of London in parliament." At the reading of this paper there was a long continued ſhout. At length the ſecondary read the nomination of Richard Oliver, Eſq; citizen and draper, which was ſigned by John Skeye, Eſq; and Mr. George Bellas. Every hand in the hall was held up for Mr. Oliver, and as ſoon as the acclamations ceaſed, and ſilence could once more be obtained, Mr. Oliver was declared by the ſheriffs to be duly elected repreſentative for the city of London. The acclamations were then repeated, after which Mr. Oliver came forward, and addreſſed the livery in the following words:

"FAVOURED as I have been, and now honoured by you, gentlemen of the livery, my words cannot ſufficiently expreſs my ſentiments of gratitude for your early and, as yet, unmerited confidence repoſed in me by the choice you have unanimouſly made of me as your repreſentative in parliament. To your general and warm ſupport it is owing that I have not had an opponent; and this circumſtance is moſt pleaſing to me, becauſe it proves that your ſpirit is not to be influenced or over-ruled whenever you think proper to unite in the free exerciſe of your rights.

I wiſh, gentlemen, that I had already given you any proofs that I ſhall not abuſe the truſt you have placed in me; but as I have not yet ſat in parliament, accept my aſſurances at preſent, that I will ever conſider myſelf as deputed by you for your benefit, and not for my own advantage; that as, in the courſe of my life I never have received or deſired, ſo, whether I have the honour to continue an alderman and repreſentative of this city or not, I never will accept, directly or indirectly, either place, penſion, emolument, contract, or gratification of any kind whatever, from the crown or its miniſters. My ſole motive of public conduct ſhall be the advancement of the public welfare, and the reaſonable honeſt hope of your approbation, free from every other influence or conſideration. I ſhall be obedient to the inſtructions you have a right to give to the ſervants you appoint. I will contribute my ſhare in any manner to render juſtice to the freeholders of Middleſex, and in them to all the other counties and boroughs in Great-Britain, for the injury they have all received by being unl——ly and moſt dangerouſly deprived of a repreſentative in parliament, who has been duly and repeatedly elected by thoſe who alone have and ought to have the right of election. I am confident, gentlemen, that your only ſecurity againſt the abuſe of that power, which you intruſt your repreſentatives, muſt be a frequent appeal to you by ſhortening the duration of parliament: by an effective, not a nugatory place and penſion bill: by an adequate and true repreſentation throughout the kingdom. For either and all of theſe ſecurities to the people my voice ſhall moſt chearfully be given, and my endeavours moſt ſtrenuouſly employed whenever the happy time comes (and through the perſevering virtue of you, my fellow citizens, it muſt come) that theſe eſſential points can be obtained. I will uſe my utmoſt endeavours to remove the juſt complaints of America, which operate to your preſent diſadvantage in a commercial connection, as well as in a political view; for the ſame ſyſtem of injuſtice and deſpotiſm, if eſtabliſhed againſt the Americans, will be exerciſed towards you; and the principles of fair government forbid that they ſhould be taxed without repreſentation, as much as that the people of this country ſhould pay taxes to which, or to the continuance of which, they have not conſented.

"I will endeavour, gentlemen, to the utmoſt of my abilities to act up to the ſtation in which you have placed me. My life will be happily employed if I ſhall ever be able to render you ſervices in any meaſure equal to thoſe of your late much lamented repreſentative, whoſe memory will be dear to me, as it is to every good citizen; but though I ſhould fail in theſe wiſhes, I can at leaſt promiſe you in full confidence, that I will equal him in the integrity of his heart, and in the independence of his ſpirit."

This is ſuppoſed to be the firſt time that ever a new member was elected for London without oppoſition.

Sir Edward Hawke having reſigned as firſt lord of the admiralty, lord Egmont is appointed in his room.

This morning arrived at lord Rochford's office, Thomas Shadwell, Eſq; ſecretary to Mr. Murray, our ambaſſador at Conſtantinople, with the propoſals of peace made by the Turks to the Ruſſians, under the mediation of the Emperor, and our court.

By letters arrived in town this day from on board the Royal Charlotte, we are informed that they met four French men of war off the Cape.

On account of the above news, the price of India ſtock fell conſiderably this day in the Alley.

JULY 14. The Eaſt-India Company have received no bad news by the late ſhips; but on the contrary, the moſt favourable accounts of the continuation of peace at all the company's ſettlements.

JULY 17. It is confidently ſaid at the weſt end of the town that our ambaſſador at the court of Verſailles has received ſome very diſguſting anſwers to certain particular objects of his enquiries there.

Some letters from Peterſburgh mention that the Ruſſian fleet, fitted out at Azoph, has orders to lay under contribution, and pillage, every conſiderable ſea port on the coaſts of the Black Sea from Trebiſon to Synope, which is within three days ſail of Conſtantinople.

Letters from Holland mention, that a courier was juſt arrived at Berlin from Conſtantinople, requeſting his Pruſſian Majeſty to mediate in the diſputes between them and the Ruſſians.

An armed corvette is actually ſailed from Breſt, under the command of an experienced lieutenant, with orders to examine the channel, to take the ſoundings, to mark the anchoring places, and, in ſhort, to make himſelf perfectly maſter of the whole coaſt, from one end to the other. This officer has on board a certain number of pilots, who are likewiſe to make themſelves maſters of this important navigation. M. de Renqueſeuille is ſaid to be the projector of this ſcheme, and that he has had it in agitation theſe thirty years, but could never before procure a commiſſion to carry it into execution.

Governor Vereiſt, who came over from Bengal in the Lioneſs, is ſuppoſed by his friends to have acquired betwixt 5 and 600,000l. ---Mr. Cartier, we hear, ſucceeds Mr. Vereiſt in the government of Bengal.

JULY 19. Yeſterday morning, about nine o'clock, came on before Lord Mansfield and a ſpecial jury, the trial of Mr. Miller, for republiſhing Junius's letter to the K--- in December laſt, in the London Evening-Poſt. Only ſeven of the ſpecial jury attending, Mr. Beardmore complained to the court of the ſummonſes not being iſſued in proper time; and that to his certain knowledge, no ſummonſes were delivered on Tueſday at twelve o'clock. The court allowed the complaint to be juſt, but took no further notice of it, and five taleſmen or common jurors, were immediately taken out of the box, when the jury was ſworn as follows:

Special. Samuel Athawes, Henry Voyſey, Joſeph Lancaſter, William Gill, John Whitmore, Joſhua Kenſhaw, William Deviſme.

Taleſmen. William Cave, William Waſher, George Moore, Joſeph Woodward, Richard Ayres.

Mr. Walker read the information, which being finiſhed, Mr. Solicitor General got up, the Attorney-General not being in court.

He ſet out with beſtowing a plentiful ſhower of ſuch epithets as "impudent, malicious, ſcandalous, and ſeditious," on the letter in queſtion, attempting to prejudice the jury againſt the defendant; declaring, that the whole was meant as a perſonal libel on the King; that his perſon ought to be ſacred, and every attempt to vilify and traduce his character, ſhould be puniſhed. He pointed out ſeveral paſſages, which, he ſaid, were ſingularly obnoxious, particularly that which mentioned Ireland and the Colonies. He endeavoured to vindicate Lord Townſhend, as well as the conduct of adminiſtration, with regard to America; aſſerting, that he wondered, in the proſecutions already tried on the ſame ſubject, the counſel for the defendants had never attempted to enter upon any particular paſſages, and juſtify the paper; which ſilence he looked upon as a ſufficient acknowledgement of its criminality on their ſide; that he could not poſſibly ſuppoſe that any lawyer either had, or could ſeriouſly mean to defend the paper, and declare the publication of it was innocent. He concluded his ſpeech, (which was as elaborate, and drudged through with as much fatigue and ſweating as we ever remember to have heard) with ſomething that ſounded very like a menace of perjury to the jury, if they did not bring the defendant in guilty.

Mr. Wallace next examined the witneſſes, who were Nathaniel Crowder, who proved the buying the paper at the printer's, and Robert Harris, of the ſtamp-office, who proved the printer's having paid for ſtamps and the duty on advertiſements occaſionally.

The publication being hereby ſufficiently ſhewn, Mr. Serjeant Glynn roſe as counſel for the defendant; he began with declaring, that as to what the learned counſel had ſaid, that no lawyer could ſeriouſly defend the paper, he had been counſel for the defendants in the former trials, when he had ſeriouſly, and did now moſt ſeriouſly and ſolemnly defend the paper, which he could not conſider as a libel on the perſon of the King; that the charge in the information was a general charge, he had therefore gone generally upon the ſubject matter of it in his ſpeeches; that particular paſſages had now been pointed out, which in his opinion made moſt ſtrongly for his client, as they certainly reflected honour on the private character of the King, whoſe perſonal virtues were uniformly acknowledged, and particularly enforced throughout the paper; that it was commonly accidental to all princes to be ſurrounded by flatterers and bad miniſters, who prevented the truth from coming to the throne; who paper he ſaid, was written with a glow of warmth, and what appeared as moſt violent was but the effect of the writer's fears of what might happen from a continuation of the then meaſures of government; both the writer and the publiſhers therefore had but obeyed their duty, as good citizens and ſubjects, to warn their neighbours of their danger, by an open and free publication of the author's opinion---he did not complain himſelf of the non-attendance of the ſpecial jury, it was ſufficient for him that the jury was compoſed of citizens of London; who would, he doubted not, properly conſider their own power and authority; who would join with him, that in this as well as in all criminal cauſes it was neceſſary that ſome proof of a malignant mind, and wicked intention ſhould be given; it did not matter what others had aſſerted, juries were in his mind, judges of law as well as fact; they were in times of danger the aſylum of the people, the acculomed refuge for them to fly to; they have been ſo formerly, and might be ſo again: he urged the importance of the preſent caſe, and hoped they would fully exerciſe their power as conſtitutional judges, and give a ſimple, intelligible, and explicit verdict; by doing otherwiſe, he declared they would deſert their duty, and betray the truſt repoſed in them; the learned opponent had labored hard to convince the jury the letter was libellous; but as the inuendos in the information had not been proved, they being taken away, the information amounted to nothing criminal; he therefore ſat down aſſured that the jury upon reading the letter carefully, upon judging deliberately, and candidly conſidering the whole ſtate of the caſe, would acquit the defendant.

Mr. Davenport, the other counſel for Mr. Miller, ſpoke next; he ſaid he totally coincided with the ſentiments of the learned Serjeant, but he had hoped, the counſel on the other ſide would in their arguments, have defined the nature of a libel; that he ſhould have been inſtructed what in their opinion was or was not libellous; he declared the giving the Attorney General power diſcretionally to file informations againſt the ſubject, was an enormous encroachment on the liberty of the people, and ought to have died with the Star Chamber; that at preſent, when the Attorney General, out of the luxuriancy of his fancy, or the intemperance of his zeal, thought proper he might file theſe informations, for the moſt trifling cauſes; that in the inſtance before them, had there been a neceſſity for proſecution, the mode ſhould have been the cuſtomary one, by indictment, which would have come under the cognizance of the grand jury, and they would have proceeded by affidavit, &c. but that the proſecutions now carrying on, ſeemed totally unwarrantable, and without any juſt authority; he ſaid, it was cuſtomary for a bad miniſter to ſcreen himſelf under the wing of majeſty, from which Junius's letter had juſtly drawn him; he next cited the ſeven Biſhops, and concluded his ſpeech with declaring his expectations, that the jury would, if they acted according to the true dictates of their conſcience, acquit his client.

The Solicitor General replied (although we hear it is not uſual when the defendant calls no witneſſes) endeavouring to overthrow the arguments uſed by the Serjeant and Mr. Davenport; He declared the proſecution then trying before the court, was filed, according to law, and according to cuſtom, officially by the Attorney General, a man of great abilities and ſtrict honour; that the act of parliament authorizing ſuch practice was made ſince the revolution, and that therefore the Attorney General had acted according to law formally and regularly inſtituted; he then recapitulated his ſpeech in the opening of the trial, repeating the ſentence he had before called obnoxious, declaring that he had before ingenuouſly ſtated them, and that as he could not alter his opinion of the whole being highly libellous of the King perſonally, he hoped, therefore, they would bring the defendant in guilty.

Lord Mansfield's charge to the jury was certainly an ingenious one, as his lordſhip delivered a doctrine totally new (at leaſt it appeared ſo to many); he told them the fact of publication was one and a material point under their conſideration, and the tenor of the information was the other; that the words ſcandalous ſeditious, &c. were inferences of law drawn from the ſubject matter of the information, and were not under their cognizance. That if they thought the publication proved, and agreed to the tenor of the paper as put on it in the information, viz. that the blanks were properly filled up, they would do right to find a general verdict and bring him in guilty, that by ſo doing they would not make the libel, as, if the law did not find it libellous, judgment would not paſs upon it.

The jury went out at twelve; and after continuing in the council-chamber ſeven hours and a half, came out, and waited upon Lord Mansfield at his houſe in Bloomſbury-ſquare, and gave their verdict NOT GUILTY.

As ſoon as the jury went out Mr. Baldwin's trial came on for the ſame alledged offence. The jury were,

Special. Edward Green, John Walter, John Hutchinſon, George Wheatley, Benjamin Winthorp, Thomas Wilkinſon, Thomas Cock.

Common Jury. William Benſon, William Hamilton, William Pyke, James Furguſon, Thomas Brown.

The ſame evidence were called and examined, to prove the publication, as had given witneſs on the prior trial; but one gentleman of the jury, not thinking the proof ſufficient, deſired Mr. Baldwin's ſervant might be examined, but not being preſent he was not ſworn.

Serjeant Glynn was animated, nervous and ſpirited in his ſpeech, firmly declaring, that notwithſtanding more highly ſtationed lawyers thought otherwiſe, he ſhould never be aſhamed to own, or have it known, that it was his opinion; that juries were judges of law as well as fact.

Mr. Cox ſpoke next for the defendant, he obſerved, that ſome words might be miſapplied in the information, as m------y might mean miniſtry as well as majeſty, and that King Charle. was in the information ſaid to mean Charles the firſt, whereas it might be intended for Charles the ſecond, and in that caſe the information fell to the ground, as many things might, with the utmoſt juſtice be ſaid of the miniſtry, which it would be dangerous and wrong to ſay of the King, and as to the ſecond matter the difference entirely took away the criminal application put upon it in the information.

The Solicitor-General replied; and lord Mansfield gave his charge nearly as before, telling the jury he did not think them judges of law, but he concluded with ſaying, that they might certainly bring in what verdict they pleaſed, as he ſhould not aſk them any queſtions, after they had given it.

The jury went out of court at three o'clock, and came out at four, waited on lord Mansfield at his houſe in Bloomſbury-ſquare; and gave their verdict NOT GUILTY.

This day both houſes of parliament met, purſuant to their laſt prorogation, and, by his majeſty's commiſſion, were further prorogued to Tueſday the 25th of September next.

WHITEHALL, July 14. His Majeſty has been graciouſly pleaſed to direct, that the Iſland of Dominica ſhould be erected into a Government ſeparate from and independent of, the General Government of the Southern Caribbee Iſlands, of which it before made a Part: And to appoint Sir William Young, Bart. to be Captain-General and Governor in Chief of the ſaid Iſland of Dominica.

PETERSBURGH, June 12. General Romanzow has tranſmitted thither a relation of the advantages gained by his army over the Turks; the ſubſtance of his diſpatches may be comprized in a few words: He engaged the enemy at Faltſchi, where he took priſoners 77 Tartars, and ſeized on 600 horſes, 1200 head of horned cattle, and 1300 ſheep; he likewiſe reſtored to liberty 300 Chriſtian families, who groaned beneath the Turkiſh yoke; the loſs of the enemy in killed and wounded, is ſuppoſed to amount to 2000.

ANCONA, June 19. Letters juſt received from Corfu bring the following intelligence, which may be depended upon. On the 17th of May a corps of Turks and Albanians ſuddenly attacked the Greeks, who, in conjunction with the Ruſſians, were beſieging Modon. The Greeks abandoned their poſts, and were partly cut in pieces, notwithſtanding the efforts of the Ruſſians, who courageouſly defended themſelves and would certainly have repulſed their enemies, had not the commandant of the fortreſs at the ſame time made a ſally, which obliged them to yield to the great number of the Infidels, and to abandon their camp and a battery of 20 pieces of cannon. Prince Dolgorucki and the young Count d'Orlow were wounded in this action, which coſt the lives of upwards of 2000 Greeks. In the mean time the Ruſſians having received a reinforcement of 400 freſh troops, drawn from their ſhips, at anchor in the gulph of Modon, they attacked (in their turn) the enemy; the greateſt part of whom were employed in pillaging the tents and baggage them to retire, and retook poſſeſſion of the battery, juſt eaſt. During this ſecond action, the garriſon made another were repulſed by the Ruſſians, who afterwards continued e of the fortreſs.

AGLIA, June 22. The laſt advices from the Morea that the 28th of laſt month the fortreſs of Mondon was he poſſeſſion of the Turks; that the Ruſſian General had rked all his troops except thoſe who compoſe the garriſon arino, in order to go againſt the Ottoman fleet, which has the Dardanelles; and laſtly, that more than 20,000 Greeks d from the Morea, to eſcape the fury of the Turks.

ICE, June 23. The Turks continue to maſſacre all the who fall in their way, as well in the Morea as iſlands of chipelago; two Turkiſh ſhips going to the Iſles Della Spezia ſailors, the inhabitants were ſo impudent as to hoiſt the a flag, upon which the Turks landed, and murdered all ound, both male and female, and not even ſo much as the children.

NTZICK, June 30. Yeſterday morning, about two t, 30 Pruſſian huſſars paſſed the Viſtula, and took poſt he territory of this city, in a place guarded by 20 men of our rriſon. Theſe huſſars were followed ſoon after by 40 n infantry, who ſeized on not only 80 of our ſoldiers, laſt ſmall pieces of cannon, and all the different poſts which oops guarded to ſecure us from the inſults of the Confede- It is reported this day, that we ſhall ſoon have upon our y 5000 Pruſſians, who are already in full march with artillery. Our magiſtrates having demanded of the Reſi- om his Pruſſian Majeſty the cauſe of this proceeding, re- for anſwer, "That, when all the troops were arrived, he know the reaſon." It is ſaid likewiſe that Pruſſian troops begin to appear on the ſides of the diſtrict of Emerland.

BURGH, July 10. We hear that his Pruſſian Majeſty intention of taking Dantzick, but only to make them his demand of ſatisfaction for a certain ſum of money, which was taken ſome time ago not far from that city, by a of people who called themſelves Confederates; the ſum te is ſaid to be about four millions of Dantzick guilders.

ESWAR, June 15. The Ottoman army paſſed the Danube and 6th inſt. which has ſtruck the inhabitants of Valla- Moldavia with ſuch a panick, that in order to eſcape the the Turks, great numbers have taken refuge in Tranſyl- The Turks have left a body of 20,000 men in the neigh- od of Widden to ſecure the proviſions which they are to get from Boſnia and Servia. There are at this time achia, Moldavia, and Beſſarabia, at leaſt 300,000 men rms, including Ruſſians, Turks, and Tartars; ſo that eſt ſoon to hear of an engagement.

SAW, June 27. According to the laſt accounts from rkiſh army, it is much harraſſed in its march by the s, and the cavalry is ſo numerous, that it is with great y it can be ſupplied with forage. Poland is quite de- all our manufactures and trade being at a ſtand, and s of 30,000 of the inhabitants are ruined.

ERSBURGH, June 18. According to ſeveral letters re- rom Temeſwar, Cronſtadt, and the frontiers of Tranſyl- a large body of Turks and Tartars, which came from bia, having attacked the Ruſſians who were beſieging , the garriſon, compoſed of 1500 Janiſſaries, made, at e time, a general ſally, and the Ruſſians were beaten, reat part of their artillery, and had 8000 men killed and

Has imported in the last vessels from LONDON,

A Compleat and general assortment of chymical, galenical preparations and drugs, with almost every family medicine now in use, among which are, the famous essence of JOHNSON or TURPETH ROOT, being a native of the remote parts of this province, and which is the most certain, easy and effectual medicine ever found in all venereal cases. Fifteen drops being taken morning and evening, in a glass of water or any thing convenient, will most effectually rout that disorder in a few days, and never leave any gleet or weeping after it, which is too often the case: It is likewise a most effectual medicine in all rhumatic complaints, leprosy, scurvy, old sores or ulcers, nay even in all chronical disorders; it will cure the yaws effectually in a few days; and will be sold on the most reasonable terms at his MEDICINAL WARE-HOUSE, in Broad-street.

STOLEN from my Landing, about the first of June last, a CYPRESS CANOE, about 18 Feet long, and three Feet and an half wide, rows with four Oars; has a Chain to her, a Piece in her Stem, and another in her Stern, with a black Bottom, and is painted red within. Whoever will deliver her to me at Bear-Bluff, shall receive TWO DOLLARS reward, from

WILLIAM SMELIE.

WHEREAS one WILLIAM SOMMERFIELD, alias SAMUEL SOMMERALL, late of the neighbourhood of Augusta, having brought FOUR HORSES before me, to prove his property, in order to enable him the better to dispose of them in the lower settlements, who being interrogated as to his right in them, shewed his guilt of having stolen them, by his running off on foot, and leaving the Horses.

The following description of them may enable the owner or owners to recover his or their property, by proving the same, before WILLIAM SWINTON.

A sorrel GELDING, 13 and an half hands high, seven years old, branded on the mounting shoulder GG, and on the mounting buttock IM, with an heart above, and has a long snip down his face.

A brown bay GELDING, 13 hands high, 9 years old, branded on the off shoulder a K.

A gray GELDING, 13 and an half hands high, 9 years old, branded on the off buttock as with the bottom of a flat stirrup iron.

A brown bay MARE, appears to be aged, branded JT on the mounting shoulder, and on the left cheek JT in one, and about 13 hands high.

The following STRAYS were brought before me to be tallied.

By Mr. JOHN LAMBERT, a brown bay GELDING, 14 hands high, 5 years old, branded on the off shoulder something resembling two OC joining, has lost the sight of his left eye.

By Mr. WILLIAM SHANDLE, overseer for Mr. John Waring, a sorrel GELDING, about 12 years old, 13 and an half hands high, branded on the mounting buttock and shoulder 11.

A Brown bay horse, about 14 hands high, branded on each shoulder thus ⓓ, both hind feet white, in care of Robert Cahusac.

A black natural pacing mare, about 13 hands high, branded on the mounting buttock J, in the care of Charles Richbourgh.

A red steer, with a crop and slit in one ear, the other with a hole in it, that looks as if it was tore out, has no perceivable brand, in the care of Gabriel Gignilliat.

A brindled bull, five years old, both ears cropt and slitted, no brand perceivable, in care of David Palmer.

A light coloured bay horse, 13 hands and an half high, branded on the mounting shoulder and buttock IC in one, in care of William Flint.

Whoever owns any or all of the above strays, must prove their property before

July 31, 1770. JOHN PAMOR.
